RV owners can use the ennoLogic laser thermometer to troubleshoot, diagnose, and perform routine checks on automotive systems, interior living and food storage areas and dozens of other details to help keep their RV running smoothly for years of enjoyment on the open road.

Eugene, United States – November 20, 2017 /PressCable/ —

Having a non-contact infrared thermometer can save RV owners time and money. With so many ways to use this tool, RV owners may never run out of new ideas and uses. From testing tire temperatures on a long road trip to measuring the air temperatures from air conditioning vents, a laser thermometer makes troubleshooting around an RV easy and painless. Use the ennoLogic laser thermometer to test radiators, fan belts, check for misfires and test braking systems for overheating.

"Most RV owners believe the main use for an infrared temperature gun is automotive diagnostics and maintenance," says Chris Johnston of ennoLogic. "However, after using the eT650D infrared thermometer, RV owners soon find this temperature gun is helpful for all kinds of things in and around their RV."

Here are just a few of the examples Johnston suggested.

The ennoLogic infrared thermometer can measure the temperature of the RV's refrigerator and freezer to make sure they are working correctly. Using the scan feature, RV owners can easily scan the interior walls for instant temperature readings.

Why not scan the food for safe storing temperatures at the same time? It's easy to make sure those frozen foods are properly frozen, or chilled dairy products are truly chilled. RV owners can even use the thermometer to prepare the foods they cook on the road. Testing frying and saute' pan surfaces, or the grate temperature of the portable outdoor hibachi grill can come in handy, too.

RV owners have lots of details to keep track of to keep themselves and their vehicles in road worthy condition and stay safe on the road. A non-contact thermometer can make some of those tasks a little simpler and easier to accomplish.

"Whether it's testing walls for heat loss due to gaps in insulation, checking gaps around doors or windows that keep the RV from heating or cooling properly, or broken ventilation fans," says Johnston, "the infrared temperature gun can track all the heating and cooling systems of an RV. and make troubleshooting a simple matter of point and shoot to take instant temperature readings."

"With all the benefits this gadget has to offer, the ennoLogic infrared thermometer is a must-have tool for RV owners," states Johnston, "This laser thermometer helps RV owners track important information to keep the RV in excellent condition, so the owner can enjoy road trips for many years to come."
